Gender and Organizational Change

Turin, Italy
9 – 13 April 2018
Gender and Organizational Change

Background
Gender equality has been on the agenda for several decades and while some important gains were made, the progress in recent years has been slow and patchy. Though governments and most private and none for profit organizations view gender justice as an important issue, truly fair and equal participation of women in the world of work is still out of reach. The mere participation of women in the world of work does not by itself guarantee equality. Gender inequitable organizations produce gender inequitable effects (though we see some positive outputs). In order to understand how to impact change in a positive way for gender equality it is critical to understand how organizations work at the deepest level.

Workshop objectives
The workshop proposes to look at how organizations have embraced gender mainstreaming, the success and barriers, but goes much further by looking at gender as part of an organizational change management strategy rather than a “stand alone” agenda item. In this workshop we will not only review the benefits and drawbacks of targeted measures to achieve equality but we will also look at other strategies at the organizational level to take into account gender issues and women’s rights.

In this workshop participants will explore ways of mainstreaming gender in organizational change and apply change management approaches and tools to support and promote gender equality in organizations. Through the integration of the two approaches (change management and gender mainstreaming) we will discuss successful strategies for change and assess the most successful elements conducive for gender equality.

Content
Participants will analyze how organizations manage change, particularly when introducing gender equality policies, strategies and actions. We will review the different types of organizations using leading management theories as well as gender frameworks. We will apply specific change management tools to concrete contexts.

Methodology
Training methods will include presentations by specialists and external lectures. They will also include individual and group learning activities in thematic fields, gender issues and change management. Participants and facilitators will work in a highly participatory environment. Group work, brainstorming and discussions will complement presentations, with a view to stimulating participants’ ability to link concepts and data to their own work and life experience.
